

A guide to recliners

Recliners Guide

Buying a recliner may not be as difficult as buying a bedroom furniture set. Some of you may think that it is just a "chair" and as long as it is comfortable to sit, then you think you are ready to make decisions.

Well, maybe you are right, but probably we should be more picky about recliners especially when we spend over $500 on a "chair". There are a few things to consider when purchasing a leather recliner:

Who is going to use the recliner?

Identify the person who is going to use the recliner first! It makes a big difference if you are buying a recliner for a person who knows about it and thus requires more functionality than if you are buying one for a person who does not care at all. This directly affect your budget setting.

How much are you willing to spend

That's right, the first thing to consider is your budget. The price of a recliner could ranges from $100 to $2000. Are you looking for a recliner that is worth for $100 or more than $1000? Clarify your budget first and ask the sales person to help you to recommend recliners that are in your price range.

What does your room look like?

You should further narrow down the choices by defining the styles you are looking for. For example, you may want to match the style of the recliner with the style of the room. Are you looking for a contemporary one or traditional one? What color you think that best fit into your room?
